Out Of Warranty Repair For 2006+ “Advanced Audio” Radios

Hogtunes gets a lot of calls from people looking to put car radios in their bike. Many guys want “Bluetooth”® functions, or a USB memory stick to hold their music, both of which are things the factory radio does not do. If the radio has an out of warranty failure, many people think they “have” to put a car radio in as a means to avoid the large expense of replacing it with another factory radio.

We recently had a 2006 Road Glide where the display had “gone out” but the rest of the radio worked fine. We ended up sending the radio to “Iron Cross Audio” in New Jersey, and were very happy with the repair, and how fast we got the radio back.

Hogtunes is in no way affiliated with Iron Cross Audio, and under no circumstances will accept any responsibility for any dealings with them, but for us, it was a great experience. On top of the display repair, they went through the unit and made sure all the mechanisms etc were in good shape, and updated the radio to the latest software version.

Any dealers or customers with a radio needing repair should consider having the radio repaired instead of feeling they “have to” replace it with a car radio. It’s always nice to know ALL the options.
